Description

What if any readings would you change or keep in this course, and why?

Everything in the course did wonders to enrich our learning experience. I wouldn't change anything.
 I didn't do any of the readings so i don't know if there worth keeping in the course.
 I greatly enjoyed the blogging. I wish we talked about it some in class though.
 I think all of the readings helped in one way or another.
 I think all the readings assigned were very useful.
 I thought all of the readings were useful and pertained to our writings.
 The readings were great. I would have liked to read more essay/short stories vs. instructional texts.
 The readings were wonderful actually.

What if any assignments would you change or keep in this course, and why?

I liked all the assignments.
 I really enjoyed both of the papers we had to write, but the personal narrative was my favorite, because it helped me develop my own voice as a writer.
 I really enjoyed the personal and persuasive essays and the feedback from the workshops.
 I really liked the blogs. I think changing the blogs from doing 12 to 10 was much more feasible for everyone.

I thought I would have done more writing in this class.

I would probably retract the blogging, just because people barely interacted with it.

More class workshops, while forcing everyone to speak instead of relying on volunteers. Class or group discussions on blog posts to be able to get better feedback instead of visiting everyone's blog to comment.

No Change

Some of the Blackboard articles though helpful I felt were somewhat overwhelming when trying to read those before class, prepare for a paper and having to do blog postings.

Take out the blog, the content posted in that area was usually trivial to say the least.

The personal narrative should be the second essay and the persuasive should be first. More time should be spent to try and help each writer find their own voice for the personal narrative.

Do you have any additional comments about the course or instructor?

Charity Fowler really cares about her writing and her students.

I love Charity and I think that is super resourceful and always prompt with help!

I loved Prof. Fowler her class was very enlightening and her teaching style was very comfortable and informative and I very much enjoyed learning from her.

I really appreciate how modern the class was and how understanding you were as a professor. This is the first time I have had an English teacher completely tear up my paper. It was needed! Thank You.

I really enjoyed this course and out of the 5 english classes I have taken this one has been my favorite so far.

Miss Fowler was a very helpful professor and understanding when it came to time constraints. Her deadlines made sense and she was always able to talk if we had any questions.

No.

She's cool, I suppose.

The workshops were also really helpful, but I think I would have liked to have had the opportunity to have a full class workshop on both papers.
